Personal Statement

I am currently working as a video games project manager at On5, a video game development company. Planning, communication, and versatility in producing game graphics are my strong suits. I like to build mutual trust and respect based relationships with my colleagues and chiefs. The video games industry has drawn me from an early age because it's not just a commercial endeavor, but also a creative one. The challenge in making a successful commercial product is what interests me most.
